2014

Capturing the entire population and collective experience of Pratt is a daunting task. Perhaps the best way to represent the range of people and pathways through the institute is to avoid condensing them into a single volume. We aimed to reference the multi-faceted nature of the school and build a holistic view of the Pratt experience. Through five different conceptual and visual models, we created individual books that illustrate Pratt and its students in the most accurate way: dynamic, honest and unique.

Doors

We

All

Touched

What is our common factor? It seems like an unthinkable coincidence that thousands of individuals from all walks of life can coalesce into a single community of like-minded creativity. The campus itself has become a vibrant, self sustaining organism. Even when it's empty, the campus breathes through the imprints left by the students who have inhabited it.

This book examines Pratt as a space. It is a moment to reflect on the walls which brought us together.

Dispersed

And

Disposable

Dispersed

And

Disposable

A cheap disposable camera is a peculiar thing. The photographs it produces aren't "high quality" by any stretch of the imagination, but its straightforward and lightweight nature put the photographer in the frame of mind that anything goes. You snap a photo in one moment and forget about it in the next.

The photos in this book were taken from over thirty disposable cameras. Each one was given to a selected student in every major. Some photographs developed beautifully while other rolls yielded nothing but blank film. The result is an intimate view of life at Pratt from the eyes of other students.

One week, 2,749 photos, over 400 students, complete freedom. How do you want to be remembered? Some chose large groups and coordinated outfits while others preferred to have their image taken alone.

There is an inherent barrier that goes up in front of a camera. None of the photos in this book were our first shots of somebody. Our goal was to break down that barrier and have a photograph that truly felt like person inside of it.

Very

Special

Thanks

To Kathleen Creighton, Michael Kelly, Emma Legge, and Philip Graziano for giving us the opportunity to work on this project. For keeping us on track, giving us the resources we needed, and more than anything believing that we could actually get this done.

To Duncan Hamilton, our advisor. Everything we work on and strive towards has been influenced by him, whether he knows it or not.

To Mike Finkelstein, our photographer. Your work is amazing and this whole thing would have gone horribly wrong without your time and expertise.

To the students who participated in each of the books. You can't fake great content, and all of you are the reason we have it.

To moderately priced candy, for keeping all the late nights tasty.

Prattonia was designed and edited by Robert Blair, Thomas Colligan and Kurt Woerpel.

Everyone was given the exact same prompt:
scan anything.

Objects, friends, food, or faces, everyone had something creative to light up the darkness of a scanner bed.

These images serve as two-dimensional portraits of the Pratt community and illustrate how creative individuals express themselves within working constraints.

The background of the page is a halftone illustration in shades of blue and white. It depicts a river or a body of water with a small boat in the middle ground. The water is represented by dark, wavy lines, and the sky or background is a lighter, textured area. The overall style is reminiscent of a woodcut or a high-contrast photograph.

"Oh I get a senior quote? Cool. Haha I don't know what to say. I don't know, I'll do one later. Wait... I can say anything? Can I do more than one? Can they be anonymous?"

This book is a catalog of graduating students and submitted quotes. During each photo shoot, at each scanner booth, and through an online form we asked graduating seniors for parting words to encapsulate their Pratt experience. Some people submitted multiple, some submitted counterfeits of friends and professors and others submitted completely anonymously. Although there is no way to know which quotes are truly authentic, this book is representative of the brains of the student body.

"To achieve greatness, one must become greatness itself through a mindset, a goal and a belief.

The mindset is the plan, the road to achieve the goal. With it comes all the experiences, achievements, headaches, heartaches, conflicts, ups and downs, and the great people one encounters on his/her path.

The goal is the target, the outcome, the dream of who one would like to be. The belief is actually being convinced that you are greatness and it's only a matter of time till it all comes into place.

Pratt taught me that I am greatness. It's only a matter of time till I achieve it. Thank you Pratt for making me see who I can be, and making me believe I can be that person."

Forgiveness, no one's perfect and the fact

Unique enough to understand that with each

Human enough to forgive,

As long as we understand that God would

Claudia Markey; Creative Writing

Originally a way to use up stale bread, hot, steaming French toast is ■ perfect addition to a brunch, as well as making a delicious cold weather breakfast treat. Follow these steps, and you'll soon be basking in delicious goodness.

1. Set the stove or electric pan to medium high heat. Place the pan over the burner if cooking over the stove. Add non-stick spray, olive oil or butter so that the bread will not stick to the pan.

2. Crack the eggs into a bowl.

3. Add milk, vanilla extract, and cinnamon and beat them with ■ fork or whisk.

4. Turn the heat down to medium-low, once the pan is heated sufficiently.

5. Dip the bread into the egg mixture.

6. Coat a slice of the bread with the mixture on both sides.

7. Place each slice onto the pan.

8. Cook the toast until it is golden on both sides. (Approximately 45 seconds per side.)

9. Put the toast on a plate. Then serve immediately with syrup.
